

Beninsula Enterprise.

ACCO AC COURT HOUSE, VA.

SATURDAY, February 10, 1906.

Entered at the Postoffice at Accomac, C. H., Va., as second-class matter.

The demand for reduction in railroad fares is not confined to the people of the State of Virginia. As shown by the Pittsburgh Gazette, New York has enjoyed a 2-cent fare for years and a step has been taken in that direction by Ohio. The Gazette says: "Great efforts are being made by the railroads to defeat the 2-cent fare bill in the Ohio house of representatives. The bill has passed the senate. One of the arguments against the measure is a threat the railroads will give inferior service if the act is passed. Ohio legislators are not likely to be much moved by this talk. New York has enjoyed a 2-cent fare for years and is getting as good service as Ohio."

"It would be more to the credit of railroad managements if they reduced their fares to 2 cents a mile without the coercion of laws fixing that maximum. They can afford it. The voluntary concession would gain the good will of the traveling public. The abolition of free passes was received by the general public with manifestations of approval. It was taken for granted the intention was to permit the whole public to enjoy some small measure of railroad favors in lieu of the former excessive favor shown the few. But if the railroads make no voluntary division the public will demand it by legislation, not in Ohio alone, but in Pennsylvania, too."

The measure has been acted upon favorably in the House and the Senate, doubtless, will recognize the duty they owe their constituents by acting as promptly in the matter. The people to whom the railroads look for their support, have the right to enjoy some small measure of railroad favors and through their representatives to expect that a just and reasonable rate of transportation should be furnished them.

A good roads bill, combining the principle features of bills offered in the two bodies of the Legislature, has been reported from the Senate committee, which if adopted commits Virginia to the policy of State aid for public roads. The system proposed is commended "as simple in operation and modest in expenditure" and surely possesses the merit of being economical as it carries with it an appropriation of only $25,000. It provides that convicts shall work on the highways and creates a highway commission, with headquarters in Richmond, composed of a commissioner who will be a civil engineer and versed in road building, and the professors of engineering of the University of Virginia, the Virginia Military Institute and Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

It is to be hoped that the bill will be adopted, whatever its defects. Any step towards improving the highways of the State is better than refusing to act for fear of going wrong. The bill is not expected to be perfect but there is no reason why it should not be a stepping stone to better things. Nothing is accomplished without mistakes, but if we profit by them, the end desired may at last be obtained. The important thing in any matter, if we wish success, is to try to do some thing, and the people of the State are to be congratulated if an effort in road building is to be made.

The resolution introduced into our Legislature to abolish school inspectors has been reported adversely by the Senate Committee on Public Institutions and Education, and wisely it is thought, by those who are in a position to give the matter proper consideration. The merits of the system cannot, it is claimed, be properly judged on the short time it has been on trial and that a further test of its value should be given as a matter of justice to the inspectors and in the interest of the schools of the State. If, after it has been tried, its value and efficiency is not proven, then it can be abolished, and two years, until the meeting of the next Legislature, is surely not too long to wait upon the trial of a system endorsed by many of the leading educators in the State.

The Governor has been so engaged for the past few days, it is stated, that he has not had time to consider appointments. Political wisecracks, however, who are not far removed from the inside of the present administration, are saying that this will be the composition of the new board of fisheries: W. McDonald Lee, Lancaster, chairman; S. Wilkins Matthews, of Accomac; Dr. Moore, of Northampton; secretary; Bland Massie, Nelson county; George B. Keozell, Rockingham; William E. Howle, Isle of Wight. If this slate shall prevail, which seems altogether likely, Mr. Keozell will be the only old member to remain on the board.

A member of the Finance Committee of the House of Delegates finds that in the aggregate the bills asking for appropriations ask $2,000,000 more than the regular appropriations which total about $4,000,000. When one remembers that the State's surplus is only about $500,000, it can readily be seen that some of the money seeking persons and institutions are liable to be disappointed before the General Assembly ends its work.

The committee on schools and colleges has reported favorably a measure appropriating $400,000 to the support of the grammar schools of the State.

Bill To Preserve Integrity Of The Mann Law.

The general assembly will have a chance to make life a burden for the "fake" clubs when the Mann bill, amending section 142 of the revenue law, presented today, comes up.

There are many people who fortify themselves with United States license, and run the risk of certain conviction; but in certain localities, it is said, the "fake" clubs take chances against conviction by the State and sell in defiance of the law. It is this last class who the amendment today seeks to stop.

Senator Mann, in discussing the amendment, said: "It does not in any way effect the sale of pure apple cider, but in order to prevent the sale of the spurious article which tends to diminish the sale of the pure article, and really to take the place of alcoholic drinks, the following exception is made in the act: 'Except pure apple cider, without any admixture whatever, except preservatives not to exceed twenty grains to the gallon.'"

"The judge said he had consulted Dr. Magruder, who told him that twenty grains of preservative was sufficient for a gallon of cider. The bill undertakes to banish distilleries under the operation of the 'Mann Law,' that is, it provides that in all sections where the 'Mann Law' operates distilleries shall procure license to manufacture just as saloons are required to secure license. This provision was made necessary by the action of the distilleries, which, in many parts of the State, really take the place of saloons and in reference to which Judge Mann stated that he had received a great many letters from many sections of the State.

In cities under 10,000 inhabitants and in towns saloons must not be nearer than 200 feet to churches and schools.

The license tax has in most cases been raised, but not unreasonably, and the word 'magisterial' has been inserted before districts in order to settle questions which have occurred as to the meaning of the word 'district'.

The police protection contemplated by the new bill is that paid for by the public, and those five words constitute one of the amendments to the bill.

The license to boats is restricted to stevedores running upon regular schedule because of the abuse of the former law in this regard.

The punishment for the violation has been somewhat increased, and after the first offense, a fine of $100 is provided, which is for violation of the law.

Jail punishment for the first offense is in the discretion of the jury, as in the present law, but for the second and succeeding offenses, has to be inflicted.

The law in reference to keeping open saloons and selling liquor on Sunday is practically the act approved March 15, 1904, except that the jail penalty which was stricken out by an amendment to the act, is restored.

Section 12 requires all social clubs to procure license as required by section 141, and provides that they shall be entitled to all the privileges, and subject to all the restrictions, conditions and penalties imposed by that section.

Judge Mann said that he had gone very fully into the evils inflicted on society by the "fake" clubs; that the present law was an effort made at the last session of the Legislature to break up those clubs without interfering with the real clubs against which Judge Mann said he had no complaint to make, but that after trying in every conceivable way and talking to a great many people on the subject, he had devised some plan by which the fake club could be destroyed without any reference to the real club, he found it impossible to devise any plan except the one contained in his bill.

These are all the material changes made by the present bill in the law as it stands today, and these changes would not have been sought, but they appeared to be necessary to preserve the integrity of the 'Mann law.' Judge Mann said that he was not disposed to ask for any radical measure; that he thought these laws should be the crystallization of public sentiment, and he only wanted to carry into effect that sentiment, and that the purpose of his bill was simply to protect the 'Mann law,' which he believed was favored by a large majority of the people of this State, and which had been productive of great good in the rural districts in Virginia.—News Leader, 6th.

Churchman's two cent. mileage bill was reported to the house of delegates Wednesday from the roads committee, which acted favorably upon the measure after a warm session in the committee-room Tuesday evening.

Senator Walker has introduced a bill to prohibit non-residents owning stock in any corporation organized for fishing with nets or traps in any of the waters of Virginia, or for the purpose of converting fish into oil, manure or fertilizer.

Debate on the Early bill amending the code so as to provide for the appointment of commissioners of the revenue by the judges of circuit and corporation courts, was begun in the house of delegates Wednesday afternoon, under a special and continuing order. The bill was reported from the committee on privileges and elections.

Petitions containing the names of thousands of people of the State of Virginia were poured into the senate Wednesday from every section of the Old Dominion. The petitions were in favor of the Mann bill and its enforcement. The Senators presenting them were H. T. Wickham, Phlegm Noell, Gunter, Harmon, Anderson, Chapman, Dickerson, Shackelford, Ashby Wickham, Kern, Sadder, Tavernier, Shands, Rison, Hobbs and St. Clair.

Both branches of the General Assembly Wednesday passed the bill recommended by Governor Swanson in his inaugural address, setting aside a sinking fund of $14,000 to be placed with the interest accruing from the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac bonds to anticipate by four years the payments on the State debt. Under the contract of settlement, the State does not have to make the first payment upon the debt until 1910, but Governor Swanson conceived and recommended the idea that the State was able, and should begin at once to extinguish her debt.

In Memoriam.

At a session of the Franklin Baptist Sunday-school, held Sunday, January 29, 1906, the committee appointed to draft a tribute of respect to the memory of Hugh M. Stephenson, and H. James S. Fox members of this school, made the following report:

He died at his home in Southampton county, January 14th, 1906, Hugh M. Stephenson, a cadet of Franklin Military Academy. This passed away a young man of high promise, high aspirations—affectionate, genial, honest, and manly, he had, besides the love lavished on him by his parents and close relatives, also won the warmest regard of his student companions, and the highest esteem of his instructors.

He died at the home of his widowed mother in Accomac county, January 3rd, 1906, H. James S. Fox, also a cadet of Franklin Military Academy. Though a newly formed acquaintance, he had found a warm friend in the hearts of all who knew him—earnest, honest, faithful, he was a man of work that led to useful knowledge. Prompt in the performance of every duty, he took his place in the front of all endeavor for good.

Human wisdom falls so far short of God's providences that we fail to see the justice of any decree that brings great affliction or deep and lasting sorrow.

We console ourselves, when He stretches His hand to pluck the tender bud of infancy, with His shielding it from the temptation of which sin and anguish are born—when old age at the foot of the hill of life, with its burden of years and its attendant infirmities, is laid on the youth, who stands on the threshold of manhood, with hope inspired by faith, sees on the hill-top the bright goal, which he reached and won by honest, earnest effort, we stand in awe and ask the reason why a kind and merciful God does not stretch His hand and save for usefulness to their fellowmen, for home, for themselves, and for the affection of loving ones, whose hearts are crushed and bleeding in their desolating sorrow.

So of the young men who have actively identified themselves with our Sunday school death has claimed Hugh M. Stephenson and H. James S. Fox whom our Christian faith takes them trusting in Christ as their friend, brother and Savior.

And while we dare not enter the sacred chamber of sorrow, with human philosophy, with unbecoming words, without, we stand, and pray that the all-wise God who has permitted this bereavement, may pour the balm of His consolation into bleeding hearts; and to feel that perhaps when time shall in some degree soothe our grief, some memory may recall the words of sympathy which we tender.

Resolved, that we spread on the records of our Sunday school the tribute to their memory—these will linger with us in their companionship, but humbly bowing to God's will and that we forward to their parents this recognition of our loss and our heartfelt sympathy in their sad and irreplaceable bereavement.

L. R. Edwards, W. C. Bryant, J. R. Knight, Committee.

In memory of my husband, J. H. Somers, who died September 1, 1905: Gone, but not forgotten. Forgotten? Ah no; who could forget a companion? The kindly words, the loving embraces, the tender looks—these will linger with us till our earthly sun hath set and the night of death comes over our sky. We may forget our dearest friends, we may forget some of earth's loveliest scenes, but upon the pictures of the past, while reason holds its place among the powers of the soul of man, we can never forget the name, the face and the love of a companion.

Not now but in the coming years, It may be in the better land; We'll read the meaning of our tears, And there sometime we'll understand.

God knows the way, He holds the key, He guides us with unerring hand; Sometimes with tearful eyes we'll see, Yes there, up there, we'll understand.

Your heart was good and true, Our married life all too quickly run, Yet it was not our will to be alone, But God's alone, His must be done.

By his wife.

In loving remembrance of my dear father, John T. Northam, who departed this life after an illness of one week, January 21, 1906, aged 75 years. All that loving hearts could do was done, but to no avail.

Death has robbed me of my father, Of the one I loved so well, He is taken from this earth of sorrow Home with Jesus to dwell.

Farwell, dear father, but not forever, There will be a glorious reward, We shall meet to part, no never, On the resurrection morn.

Dear father, could you but speak to me, And could you live again, I'd heal My longing heart, I would then be But this I wish in vain.

I wanted you, my father, To live with me so glad— To think what you suffered, But in Heaven I shall be glad.

By his Daughter.

Will Be Married

And you will need a Wedding Present for the occasion. To get it you must come to me, if you want the best, for the least money. My stock of Sterling Silverware, and other articles suitable for wedding presents is unusually large and complete, as also my stock of Watches, Jewelry, Silver Novelties and everything belonging to a Jewelry Store of the first-class (now in my new brick store between Postoffice and Hotel.)

The reason that my prices are low, is that I keep down expenses—buy close for cash and am satisfied with much smaller profits than you pay elsewhere. You save more than I lose on each article you buy from me. My long experience teaches me that this method is best for me as well as my customers. I am a graduate optician and refractometer and fit you properly with glasses—making no charge for examining your eyes.
